BURDETTE'S PHILOSOPHY

HIS HAIR-US-ON

HIS HARR-IS-ON.

While the Indian delegation was loading around Washington the president said to Old-Man-Afraid-of-the-Rheamatia, "Why does the great chief have eleven wives!" And the grim old warrior answered the great father sternly, "To keep his wig-warm."

"Noah was correct," was the pensive remark of the last of the antediluvians, as he mate to the sharp edge of a rock and reluctantly laved his shrinking feet in the rising tide; "he said there would be a delage, and there's no delageon about this." And as he chuckled hearsely over the base remark, a pleyyodactyleosophagaurian, floating near, by with a view to picking up anything that might happen, remarked that a fellow couldn't be expected to stand everything, and, opening a mouth somewhat longer than his entire body, took the humorist in out of the wet.

TOO MUCH PREPARATION.

A Brockien man has spent forty years working on a plan for a ship railroad across the Istimus of Panaman And a man in Pittsburg has been working twenty-two years at another one. Neither plan is yet completed. Too long, that's the trouble. One of those days a man who has been too busy to think much about it will get up and put a ship railroad across the isthmus before he finds out that he has to have a plan. That's the way these things are frequently done.

A BAD DILYDDR.

Whitegoods awakens suddenly in the night, sees a figure in his room, fires and brings the intruders down. Dying robber falters, with labored accent: "You fired just in time; another minute and I would have cut your throat." Whitegoods, similaring with removes: "And you're only a burgiar, then! By George, old man, I'm awfully sorry, why dish't you speak! I thought it was an advertising solicitie."

Hear we are again.

Well, sir, time cours round and round and round, doesn't it! We see by the papers Mrs. Laugtry is 36 again

Langury is 36 again:

TOU CAN'T ALWAYS TELL.

What various sorts of fools one meets in this pilgrimage. Now, here is a couple of people in Stainford have gone and named their first baby Methinselsh, when the little fellow isn't ten days old. But bold on a bit; we applogize. Who can tell what may happen! Little dill Encoh (fream, when he named his first born Methinselsh, how appropriate was the name.—Burdette in Brooklyn Eagle.

A wicked, wicked story is told by The Chicago Mail, to the effect that a mew reporter on The Tribume of that city went the other evening to "write up" a reception. He got ladies and gentleman, the center of a group of ladies and gentleman, the center of a group of ladies and gentleman, the center of a group of ladies and gentleman, the center of a group of ladies and gentleman, the center of a group of ladies and gentleman is a corner of one of the pariors. The young man had jotted down the names of the others and asked the gray bearded old gentleman very politely: "Will you kindly give me your mane, sir! I'm making a list of the gueste." "Ehr" said the gray bearded old gentleman, putting his hand to his car. "I would like your name, if you please!" repeated the reporter. "Ehr What!" and the old man inclined his besal attentively. The young man thought: "Well, here's a nice old guy to be turned loos in decent society. I woulder why he doesn't carry an ear trumpet?" But he only gathered a ling full of wind and Sahl in a voice that startled the dancers: "I'm a reporter, and would like your name." "Oh, reporter, eth What paper?" "The Tribune. Will you give me your name?" "Oh, reporter, eth What paper?" "The Tribune. Will you give me your name?" The old gentleman stroked his gray whiskers tanderly, looked at the reyour name? The old gentleman stroked his gray whishers tonderly, looked at the reporter calmly, and said quietly: "Joseph Medill."—New York Tribune.

The Future Generation

The Future Generation.

The sweet girl graduate and the bumptious boy graduate are with us again. We are glad to meet them and shake hands with them across the chase of years. We are glad to hear once more their plans for giving down trodden woman her proper sphere in life, and for solving within a few weeks time all the social problems. We sympathize with them most heartily; for a happy experience has taught us what a blasful thing it is to know so much. Were they a whit less enthusinatic we should be ashamed of them, and predict for them failure in the coming struggle with the world. As it is, they are our hope, and they give us fresh courage.—Albany Express.

A Great Scheme.

Mrs. Oldrich—I was very sorry to miss you tast week. I thought I had hit upon your day to be at home. Have you changed it! Mrs. Newcome—Oh, no! I have no regular day. Mrs. Oldrich—But your card says Thursday. Mrs. Newcome—Yes; inn't it convemient! I noticed them at the stationer's. They're such a next reminder. I have a pack for every day in the week, so that folks will remember just what day I called.—Boston Commercial Bulletin.

His Grand Destiny.

His Grand Destley.

"You have spent eight years in college, three at a theological school and two in the study of theosophy, and yet you do not intend to enter the ministry. May I ask what special career you are fitting yourself for?

"I am studying for murriage with a Bosten gir!," replied the scholastic enthusiast, his voice trenutious and his dark, melancholy eyes lighting up with an eager, aspiring gleam.—Chicago Tribuna.

Not a Hell's Eye.

Hicks (to Briggs, who has had a day out at target practice)—Did you hit the bull's eye, old man?

Briggs—No; it was a cow, I believe. At any rate it cost me a hundred dollars to fix it up with the fellow who owned the critter.

Shad and Strawberries.

Shad and Strawberries.

When the angels made shad
The devil was mad,
For it seemed such a feast of delight;
So to ruin the scheme
He jumped in the stream
And stuck in the bones out of spite.

When the strawberry red
First illumined its bed,
The angels looked down and were glad;
Dut the devel, 'tis mid,
Fairly pounded his head,
For he'd used all his bonce on the shad,
